BY LATE ARRIVALS.

SCHAFFAUSEN (Switz.) July 9.

"In consequence of the successes of the French, and their promptitude in following up their advantages over the allies, Conde's army was cut off from the Imperial army, and hid themselves in the Black Forest near Sultz. Determined, however, to come out, their retreat was marked with every kind of excess that could be perpetrated by a licentious soldiery; they pillaged houses, and fired villages, and violated the chastity of wives and daughters. Several troops of the Empire, and a party of the Suabian militia, roused with indignation on hearing of these excesses, engaged the emigrant army and routed them. A vast number remained dead on the field of battle, and the survivors were pursued and dispersed in the forest.

"The French army in Suabia amounts to 70,000 men. The battles, which take place between the Republicans and the Emigrants, are most obstinate and bloody, and for the most part terminate in the utter destruction of the one or the other party."

PARIS, July 9.

The Emigrants who have been obliged to quit Switzerland, are stated at 8 or 10,000. There have been no exceptions.

Moreau, General in Chief, to the Executive Directory.

Head-quarters, Offenbourg, 12th Messidor, (June 29.)

"Citizen Directors,

"In my dispatch of yesterday I announced to you, that after the evacuations of the camp of Bissel, General Defaix proceeded rapidly with the troops destined to the attack of the camps towards Appenhyic and Rataffen, foreseeing that the reinforcements which the enemy had received from the lower Rhine, would bring on a serious engagement.

"General St. Suzanne, who remained at Rataffen to keep them in check, was already engaged with the enemy when these troops under Defaix arrived there.

"The enemy occupied the excellent position in front of the village of Renchen and of the river of that name, rendered famous by Marshal Turenne's passage of it.

"The battle began with the utmost obstinacy; the cannonade was terrible; the enemy protected by a wood on their rear, manœuvred with rapidity in order to surprise one of our flanks; but the reserve, directed in a proper manner, rendered their attempts useless, and drove them back every time with loss.

"The cuirassiers of Kawanack at length attempted to turn our right and charged with vigor; but two battalions of the 97th demi-brigade, supported by the carabineers and the light artillery, drove back the cuirassiers, and though surrounded on all sides they manœuvered with sang froid, in order to direct their fire to all the points where they were menaced. The enemy left the field of battle covered with dead bodies and horses.

"Without being disheartened by the check, the enemy directing a grand effort against our left, attempted to turn it, and attack it in front. At the moment in which our infantry were ready to penetrate into the wood, they attacked it with their whole cavalry with great impetuosity. This movement had been foreseen—General St. Suzanne immediately made Adjutant-General Levasseur charge the cavalry in flank, at the head of the Chasseurs, and in front by the 6th dragoons and 15th cavalry. Astonished at this movement, the enemy were soon put to a complete rout by the rapidity of the charge.

"The infantry, cavalry, and artillery saving themselves in the greatest disorder, the 84th and 10th demi-brigades pursued them as quickly as the horse; the grenadiers of the last brigade took two pieces of cannon, and in one instant we were masters of the river and the village of Renchen.

"As soon as the defiles were occupied we continued the pursuit. General St. Suzanne's Aid-de Camp came up with them at Valenbach; in a moment they were defeated and put to the rout. The troops did not stop till night, and until loaded with horses and prisoners they could go no further.

"The loss of the enemy was enormous. We took in killed and wounded 600 horses, and made 1,200 prisoners, 500 of whom are wounded, 10 pieces of cannon, and almost all the light infantry. The field of battle was covered with dead bodies.

"Such complete success, Citizens Directors, renders it unnecessary to make an eulogium upon the troops; they shewed a courage and a coolness of which there are few examples.

"General Defaix and St. Susanne, and Adjutant-General Decamp and Levesseur, and the Chief of Brigade, Fouconnot, manœuvred with admirable precision and bravery.

"Citizens Vigneron and Young, Lieutenants in the 7th drrgoons, particularly distinguished themselves in the pursuit of the enemy. The former took the commander of the rear guard, whom he had wounded, and to whom he immediately administered the necessary assistance with an eagerness which he did not shew for his own wounds, which he would not have dressed till after the affair.

"As soon as I shall have received a report upon the other traits of bravery, I will give you an account.

"Health and respect,

"MOREAU."

"Citizen Directors,

"ON the 13th (July 1) we pushed a reconnoitering party to the camp of Babrac. The enemy occupied it as well as the position of Knubis, at the back of the black mountains. All the advanced posts of the enemy were driven into the camp.

"A company of grenadiers of the 100th demi-brigade, charged by 150 Emigrants, who called out to them to surrender, and cry Vive la Roi, and they would do them no harm, replied by a well directed fire, which killed 20 of the Emigrants; the rest fled. The grenadiers would have injured themselves by the pursuit if they had not been checked.

"On the 14th (July 2) Brigadier-General La Riche proceeded with the 21st demi-brigade of light-infantry and a detachment of the second regiment of chasseurs to Openau and Knubis. The defile of Renchen which he had to penetrate, was full of enemy's troops, and of armed peasants, whom, however, he soon dispersed. He found the enemy in great force upon the mountain of Knubis, the highest of the Black Mountains; he did not hesitate to attack them, in spite of the obstacles which the ground presented, without artillery; the roads would not permit him to have any.

"After having driven them from the Mountain, where they had made the most obstinate resistance, there remained to be carried a very strong redoubt, which the enemy had built upon the summit, with a casement surrounded by a ditch.

The courage and impetuosity of the French, could alone overcome such an obstacle. General Laroche was the first to jump into the ditch; and notwithstanding the terrible fire of those who defended the redoubt, and the grenades which they threw into the ditch, he scaled the walls at the head of the brave chasseurs whom he commanded.

"The loss of the enemy was considerable; the field of battle was covered with dead bodies. Four hundred prisoners were taken, two pieces of cannon, and two pair of colours.

"The prince of Wurtemburg, commanded in person, and, before the affair, he harrangued his troops, hoping, he said, they would defend the redoubt better than they had done Kehl.

"I have conferred the rank of corporals on citizens Saboron and Dumont, who were the first to leap into the redoubt, and to take the colours.

"General Laroche's conduct is above all praise.

"Health and respect,

(Signed) "MOREAU."

The Commissary of the Government with the Army of the Sambre and Meuse, to the Executive Directory.

"Citizens Directors,

"General Jourdan did not wait, in order to return to the right bank of the Rhine, and to join Kleber, for the retreat of the army encamped between Neuwied and Bendorff. He forced them to hasten in disorder by passing the Rhine in their sight, and in strong force. This expedition, whose boldness astonished the enemy, was attended with complete success.

"While these intrepid Republicans, by the activity of their movements, and multiplied acts of the highest valor, forced the enemy's columns to precipitate flight, the bridge of Neuwied was re-established; and at the end of five hours, the division landed in the plain, formed, and pursued the Austrians. The terror which this unexpected passage occasioned was such, that one of their Generals surprised at his head-quarters at Bendorff, could only save himself by leaving his baggage, papers, &c. behind him.

"It is certain, that if we could have had sufficient means of passing over the Rhine a small body of cavalry, the retreat of the enemy would have been cut off.

"We have already taken two hundred prisoners, two pieces of cannon, and a great number of waggons.

"Health and respect,

(Signed) "JOUBERT."

ELECTION ANECDOTES.

Sir Richard Steele who represented the borough of Stockbridge in the reign of Queen Ann, carried his election against a powerful opposition by the merry expedient of sticking a large apple full of guineas, and declaring that it should be the prize of that man whose wife should first be brought to bed after that day nine months.

The non-resident freemen of Berwick upon Tweed, living in London, being put on board 2 vessels in the Thames, immediately previous to the election of 1768, in order to be conveyed to Berwick by water, Mr. Taylor, one of the candidates in opposition, covenanted with the naval commander of the election cargo for the sum of 400l. to land the freemen in Norway. This was accordingly accomplished, and Mr. Taylor and Lord Delaval took possession of their seats without any further expence.

The Burgesses of a distant corporation being convinced of the necessity of opposing an act of Parliament which put a greater power into the hands of excisemen, they wrote a very polite request to their representative, desiring him to oppose the measure with all his might; in answer to which they received the following respectful letter.

Gentlemen,

I received yours; I am surprized at your insolence, in troubling me about the excise. You know what I very well know, that I bought you; and I know what you don't think I know, that you are selling yourselves to somebody else; and I know what you don't know, that I am buying another borough. May the curses of heaven light on you all. May your houses be as open and as common to all excise officers, as your wives and daughters were to me when I stood for your scoundrelly corporation.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE, July 22.

Extract of a letter from Vice Admiral Macbride, to Mr. Nepean, dated on board his Majesty's ship Russel, in Yarmouth Roads, July 21.

"Please to inform my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty of the arrival of his Majesty's ship Glatton, after having had an action with six French frigates, a brig and cutter, off Helvoetsluys. Enclosed is a letter from Capt. Trollope, giving an account of that spirited affair. I have ordered her to the Nore to refit."

Extract of a letter from Capt. Trollope, of his Majesty's ship Glatton, to Vice Admiral Macbride, commanding his Majesty's ships and vessels in Yarmouth Roads, dated the 21st inst.

"I beg leave to inform you, that in pursuance of your orders, I sailed in his Majesty's ship Glatton, on the 15th of July, from Yarmouth Roads, in order to join Capt. Savage and a squadron under his command; and on the 16th at one, P. M. we observed a squadron about four or five leagues off Helvoet. Owing to light winds and calms it was seven P. M. before we were near enough to discover the squadron to consist of six frigates, one of which, the commodore's ship, appeared to mount fifty guns; two others appeared about thirty-six guns, remarkably fine long frigates, and the other three smaller, and might mount about twenty-eight guns each. There were also a very fine brig and cutter with them. We soon suspected, from their signals, and their not answering our private signals, that they were enemies, and immediately cleared for action, and bore down to them.

From their manœuvring it was ten at night before we got close along side the third ship in the enemy's line, which from her size, we suppose to be the commodore; when after hailing her and finding them to be a French squadron, I ordered him to strike his colours, which he returned with a broadside, and I believe was well repaid by one from the Glatton within twenty yards; after which the action became general with the enemy's squadron, the two headmost of which had tacked, and one of the largest had placed herself along side, and another on our weather bow, and the sternmost had placed themselves on our lee quarter and stern; in this manner we were engaged on both sides for a few minutes, with our yard arms nearly touching those of the enemy on each side; but I am happy to acquaint you that in less than twenty minutes the weight of our fire had beat them off on all sides; but when we attempted to follow them, we, much to our regret, found it impossible. I have no doubt, from the apparent confusion the enemy were in, we should have gained a decisive victory, but unfortunately, in attempting to wear we found every part of our running rigging totally cut to pieces, and the major part of our standing rigging: every stay, except the mizen, either cut or badly wounded, and our masts and yards considerably damaged. In this situation, although every officer and man exerted themselves to the utmost the whole night, it was seven in the morning before the ship was in tolerable order to have renewed the action. The enemy, who appeared in the morning in a close line, seemed to have suffered very little in their rigging, although I am certain they must have much damage in their hulls, at which the whole of our fire was directed. As they did not chuse to come near us again, although they must plainly have seen our disabled state, but made the best of their way for Flushing, and we followed them as close as we could till the 17th at nine A. M. when they were within three leagues of that port, with the hopes of meeting with some assistance to enable me to destroy them; but it coming on to blow hard at W. in the disabled state the ship was in, we were forced to haul off the shore; but although we were not able to take any of them, I trust you will think the officers and men whom I have the honor to command in the Glatton, to whom I have reason to give every merit for their steady, gallant, and cool behaviour in the attack, having done their utmost, and also some good, in driving so very superior a force into port to refit that might have done very considerable damage to our trade had they got to sea. I cannot conclude this without recommending to your notice, in the strongest manner, lieutenant Robert Williams (2d) my first lieutenant, who gave me every assistance in his power on the upper deck: and also lieutenant Schomberg, second lieutenant, who commanded on the lower deck; and also Captain Strangeways, of the marines, who, I am very sorry to acquaint you, has received a bad wound from a musquet ball in his thigh, which is not extracted yet, who, after he had received it, and had a tourniquet on, insisted on coming on deck to his quarters again, where he remained, encouraging his men, till he was faint with the loss of blood, and I was under the necessity of ordering him to be carried down again; and all the warrant and petty officers and ship's company behaved as English sailors always do on such occasions. And I am particularly happy in acquainting you, that I have not lost one life in so warm an action, and only one wounded besides Captain Strangeways, viz. William Hall, the Corporal of Marines, who also received a musquet ball through his thigh bone; the ball passed out on the opposite side. Our small loss can only be attributed to their firing totally at our rigging to disable us, in which they too well succeeded; and his majesty's ship Glatton, being unfit to keep the sea from the damage she has received in her masts, yards, and rigging, I have thought it, for the good of his majesty's service, to come to Yarmouth roads to refit."

CAPTURE OF COLOMBO.

The following particulars are communicated by an officer of high rank in the East India Company's service, who dates his letters from Wolfendah, February 13, 1796—

"On the 7th of February, Major Petrie marched with a conſiderable detachment from Nigambo, and croſſed a river 100 yards broad, deep, but not rapid, the whole diſtance making about 11 miles.

"The 8th, moved forward, and reached a deep Nullah, where had been a ſtrong wooden bridge, which the enemy deſtroyed on our approach. As the Nullah was not fordable, it was neceſſary to repair the bridge, which detained us ſome hours. The Nullah was diſtant about four miles from our former ground, and we encamped at Paſſibattal on the large river Mallway two miles farther. On the oppoſite banks of this river, which is 170 yards broad, the enemy were poſted in conſiderable force, having with them ſix pieces of light cannon.

"About two miles farther up, and nearly the ſame diſtance towards the ſea, they had eſtabliſhed themſelves in the ſame manner. We halted until we were joined by Colonel Stuart with the line, and to allow time to provide rafts and boats. This river is three miles from Colombo; and every appearance threatened an obſtinate reſiſtance.

"On the 10th, the enemy perceiving probably ſome of our parties, diſcharged 18 guns, but without doing us any damage.

"On the 11th, to our complete aſtoniſhment, this formidable paſs was diſcovered to be abandoned, and with the utmoſt expedition we croſſed almoſt all the army in the courſe of the ſame day.

"On the 12th, the flank companies were attacked by 200 Europeans and 600 Malays. The line was ordered to advance for their ſupport; but before any of the corps could render any effectual aid, they had charged and totally defeated the enemy.—This happened almoſt under the walls of Colombo.

"In this gallant and deciſive affair, our loſs was two European grenadiers killed, and nine wounded. Volunteer Grant was ſeverely wounded, and Captain French ſlightly. The enemy loſt about 170 killed and wounded, chiefly Malays. Some officers of rank fell, and Lieutenant-Colonel Raymond is dead of his wounds.

"In the beginning of the action, the Malays diſplayed their uſual treachery, and appeared before our poſts making ſigns of ſubmiſſion, laying their dreſſes, &c. on the ground: a Dutch officer diſgraced himſelf by a ſimilar conduct.

"We have now taken up our final poſition about 300 yards from the fort, in the ſkirts of the Pettah, and all our exertions are now to land our artillery and ſtores. This buſineſs will ſoon be decided: they have given us no diſturbance ſince the action, and all our accounts agree in their diſunion and deſpondency."

"Colombo, Feb. 16, 1796.

"I have unfeigned pleaſare in giving you the earlieſt intimation of our ſucceſs.—Colombo this day capitulated to Colonel Stuart.

"The diſunion and want of exertion amongſt the enemy, ſuggeſted the propriety of ſummoning the fort; and Major Agnew, the Adjutant-General, was accordingly diſpatched with a flag of truce.—This happened on the 14th, and towards evening a ceſſation of hoſtilities was proclaimed for 24 hours, when it was underſtood that articles of capitulation were agreed to.

"The 15th was employed in finally adjuſting the terms of the ſurrender; and this morning, at ten o'clock, the flank corps of the three regiments, two companies of artillery, the 52 regiment and grenadier battalion, took poſſeſſion of this important conqueſt.

"Since the affair of the 12th not one ſhot had been exchanged, and every ſtep of the enemy had exhibited the moſt apparent marks of imbeciſity and indeciſion.

"I am not informed of the particular articlea of capitulation; but learn, that in general they are becoming the Britiſh character—highly favorable to the beſieged, without doing any injuſtice to the intereſts of our honorable employers; and that about £. 60,000 of paper currency is to bear an intereſt of 3 per cent. for which our government is to become ſecurity.

"The public property of Colombo is immenſe, without noticing the great quantity of riches at P. de Galle, included in the capitulation, as well as every other poſt remaining with the Dutch: four companies of Madras Sepoys ſailed laſt night, to take poſſeſſion of P. de Galle, which finiſhes the complete reduction of the Iſland of Ceylon.

"The capture of Colombo may, without any hazard of contradiction, be deemed one of the moſt valuable that has ever fallen to our arms:—the article of cinnamon alone is valued at a ſum of no leſs magnitude than 26 ſacks of pagodas.

"The garriſon conſiſted of 800 ſoldiers, 500 ſailors, 1,100 Malays, 300 Sepoys, and 700 Cingaleſe, beſides burghers."

PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 20, 1796.

MARRIED, by the Rev. William Marſhall, ROBERT REED, of this city, to Miſs CATHERINE CONNOR, of Baltimore.

Yeſterday morning the Preſident of the United States left this city for Mount-Vernon.

A correſpondent has furniſhed us with the following copy of a decree of the Queen of Portugal, for ſuſpending all intercourſe with Holland, and laying an embargo on the Dutch veſſels in her dominions:—

THERE having been preſented to her Majeſty, by her envoy extraordinary to the United States, in a diſpatch dated the 15th of June laſt, the copy of a Letter he had received from the Committee of Foreign Affairs of that Republic, in which is communicated to him the reſolution for ſuſpending all political communication with the ſaid miniſter, as the Repreſentative of her Majeſty the Queen of Portugal, 'till the concluſion of Peace with the Republic of France—intimating by the abovementioned letter that all commercial relations ſhould alſo be ſuſpended.

Under theſe circumſtances her Majeſty has judged proper to ſuſpend on her part, all commerce with the States General of the Low Countries, and to prohibit to her vaſſals, all and every commercial tranſaction and connection with the ſubjects of the Republic, prohibiting from this time all navigation to the ports of thoſe States.

And moreover her majeſty has been pleaſed to ſuſpend in her dominions, all and every tranſaction with the aforeſaid United States of the Belgic Provinces, and to forbid the tranſportation of their property, under whatever title, out of the Kingdom; and finally that the departure of the Dutch veſſels in her dominions ſhould be entirely ſuſpended, remaining under embargo 'till further orders from her Majeſty.

And that this may be known unto all and executed accordingly, the preſent has been made public.

LISBON, July 19, 1796.

Extract of a letter, from an American Gentleman in Havre, dated July 25.

"Every thing is quiet in this country.—Proviſions in plenty and cheap which being the greateſt conſideration with the French eſpecially bread, every thing elſe is forgotten and they are the happieſt people in the world. Their ſucceſſes which aſtoniſh Europe are conſidered in much the ſame light as their loſſes, barely related and that is all—they have no effect whatever either in much raiſing or depreſſing their ſpirits—In fact it is well that ſuch is their manner otherwiſe the gloom muſt exceed deſcription, for every body, more or leſs has ſuſtained a loſs in property, family or friends—but nothing of this kind is perceived, all appears lively and in ſpirits.

The government appears to be firmly eſtabliſhed, every domeſtic diſturbance is ſuppreſſed and the whole country from one end to the other enjoys tranquility—Liberty of ſpeech and of the preſs are allowed as freely as with us—Agriculture flouriſhes beyond conception—The police is ſo ſtrict that highway robberies are hardly known.

Manufactories are encouraged by gifts from the Nation—Schools are about eſtabliſhing in every part—Religion is the ſame as prior to the Revolution. Liberty of religious opinions is held ſacred—the arts are much encouraged and in general ſuch meaſures are about taking to render the people as wiſe if poſſible as they are brave—Latterly there has been no great talk of a peace tho' from the continued ſucceſſes of the French this Campaign it cannot be far diſtant.

Franckfort is in their hands and they are ſtill progreſſing in the enemies Country.—Buonaparte the General in Italy has ſent upwards of One hundred millions of livres to Paris in ſpecie; about the ſame amount to Genoa and has maintained his whole army by the contributions he levied and the payments he received as the price of peace from a number of princes." (Aurora.)

BY THIS DAY's MAIL.

NEW-YORK, September 19.

It is ſaid that Lieutenant Cudworth was lately killed in a duel by Lieut. Geddes, at Weſt-Point.

By Capt. Burnham, of the brig Dean, in 49 days from Havre-de-Grace, French papers have been received from Paris to July 25, by which it appears, that ſucceſs attends the French armies in Germany. The duke of Wirtemberg has propoſed an armiſtice, which is acceded to. The ſame by the Marquis of Baden, who has ſent miniſters to Paris to negociate a peace.—

Capt. D. informs, that every thing in France is in a flouriſhing ſtate—a great crop of grain is expected. Flour was offered in Havre, July 29, for 48 livres, caſh. By a decree, mandats no longer paſs as caſh; all agreements made in ſpecie are paid in ſpecie. Nothing but ſpecie is paſſing at Havre. Every thing low—good beef, two pence a pound. Specie is plenty, ſince paper has ceaſed to circulate as money. Trade and manufactures begin to flouriſh.

The French have impoſed on the city of Frankfort a contribution of 37 millions of florins; about three millions and a half ſterling.

Accounts from Genoa ſtate, that the French government has demanded of the Genoeſe government to ſhut all their ports againſt all Engliſh ſhips of war and merchantmen. It is added the ſame demand is made of Spain, and that the Court ſeemed diſpoſed to comply.

BALTIMORE, September 17.

But one thing more remains to be done by that goodly great man GEORGE WASHINGTON (ſhould he decline the preſidential chair) to fill up the meaſure of his glory—and that is; to conciliate the jarring paſſions of convulſed Europe, and reſtore to that devoted quarter of the globe, what he has ſo wiſely preſerved to his own happy country, the INESTIMABLE BLESSINGS of a LASTING PEACE If this, as Eſchaſſeriaux aſſerts, is to be accompliſhed only by a congreſs of wiſe men, who ſo fit to preſide, as HE who has ſhown to an admiring world, that PEACE is a gem that he dares to prize, above the love of vulgar fame.

WILMINGTON, September 19.
